First settled over a century ago and incorporated into a city 80 years ago, the city of Upland is rich in history. As the city has grown it has changed with the times, but some of its older buildings still stand in tribute to its past.

On the cover, is the now-deserted Sante Fe Railroad Depot. It is the second depot to stand on that spot. Built in the Spanish mission style in 1936, the building sits just south of the Town Center on A Street, into a restaurant.

The Upland Police Department, top left, was once the City Hall. It was built in 1939 in the moderne style as part of President Franklin Roosevelt's Works Projects Administration. It became the police office in the mid-1970s, but the department has since outgrown it.

Plans are being drawn now for a new station at a location in the northwest portion of the city,, which would be constructed in about two years.

Like the police department, the Detective Bureau, center, once served another purpose. It was originally a public library built with $10,000 donated by philanthropist Andrew Carnegie in 1913. Local builder John Geery constructed it in the classic style. It later was used by the city Recreation Department before the Detective Bureau took it over.

City officials are considering turning the City Hall-turned-Police Department into a senior citizens' center and the library-turned-Recreation building-turned-Detective Bureau back into a Recreation Department building.

The office building, right, popularly known as "The Castle House," was originally a physician's home. According to an old newspaper article, it was built in 1905 by Dr. L.V. Harvey at 219 N. Euclid St. Harvey told the reporter that it was the first all-electric house in Upland.

R.C.'s Grape Harvest Festival stomps out lots of family fun

By Andrew Horan

Two pillars of American society stood side-by-side in Ontario last week.

Family and fun combined to make the sixth annual Grape Harvest Festival a frolicking success for the Marks of Alta Loma.

Three of JoAnn Mark's five adult children rented $195 booths at the Rancho Cucamonga Chamber of Commerce's festival this year.

They sold everything from cinnamon rolls at the "Mr. Buns" booth to custom woodwork at the E-Z Sills display and needlework at the "Meredith Mark" tent.

Things were not going too well for Randy Mark at the Mr. Buns booth an hour before the festival opened Thursday.

High winds and a tricky pilot light kept

Randy's two ovens from firing up, and at 5 p.m. all he and friends Mark Peterson and Steve Vatcher had to show for their efforts were a few pans of raw dough.

Soon enough, the ovens kicked on and they were rolling in the dough.

Just a few paces away, David and Christie Mark proudly pointed to custom bookcases and children's furniture that David produces.

After working on ships for 11 years, David moved back to the area to ply his craft in Alta Loma and Upland.

Mary Vidiner, nee Mark, travelled even farther to participate in this year's festival.

"We were living in a log cabin in Alaska," Mary said of her husband and five children.

"It's really great to come back here and see it — we really appreciate Southern California."

Local callers hear some good news from GTE official

By Andrew Horan

General Telephone Co. officials last Thursday night told a group of 70 Etiwanda residents what they wanted to hear: Free calls to Ontario may once again be the rule.

But Hal Overton, GTE's Ontario district manager, also had words that fell harshly on residents' ears: The change will not happen for at least 1 1/2 years.

"We want to fix it so you have local calling to Ontario," Overton told an anxious gathering at the Rancho Cucamonga Elks Lodge, "but we can't change it back tomorrow."

Overton and three other GTE officials joined two Public Utilities Commission representatives at the monthly

Council schedules Carden Arbor hearing

By Kimberly Heinrichs

Carden Arbor View School will have to show the Upland City Council why it should keep its operating permit, the council voted last week.

The public hearing at the council's Nov. 3 meeting will be the start of legal proceedings to revoke the private school's conditional use permit, according to City Attorney Don Maroney.

The school took the city to court last winter to stop it from enforcing the requirement of a new roof on one of the buildings and landscaping on a vacant lot by the school.

Although the court ruled the school must follow city requirements, it has yet to comply.

Angry neighbors of the school at 1510 N. San Antonio Ave. have been protesting this and other problems, including traffic and parking, since shortly after the school opened in 1981.

Upland residents want attorney removed

By Kimberly Heinrichs

Upland residents living near Carden Arbor View School have submitted letters with 45 signatures asking for the While most of the other problems have been cleared up, Maroney said the school has been unable to specify a time when the roof and landscaping will be completed. He was told the roof could take up to three years, he said.

"The problem they're having is financing," Maroney said. "We don't have any commitment as to when (they) will get this done."

The city attorney said the school is unable to come up with what he estimates would be $25,000 to complete the work to protect its $400,000 investment. Thomas Brayton, attorney for the school, has said the cost would

The council voted to begin the proceedings with little comment. If the council decides to revoke the permit and the school refuses to accept its reasoning, the matter will wind up in court, Maroney said. Carden Arbor has sued the city twice before.

The city attorney added that the council could vote to amend the permit, deleting the requirements, or give the school more time after listening to the representatives' story.

However, at Monday's City Council meeting, Mayor Richard Anderson said it was past the time to give the school more leeway to get the work done meeting of ACTIVE (Advisory Committee to Improve Victoria's Environment) to explain how zone usage measurement (ZUM) charges affect customers with an 899 prefix.

GTE implemented ZUM charges for those Etiwanda callers June 1.

Under the ZUM plan, calls west to Ontario are charged by the minute, while calls east to Fontana and Rialto remain free.

Soon after the firm began assessing the charges, Etiwanda residents began ringing up complaints.

Overton and Roger Smith, a GTE rates administrator, explained the charges were structured to provide free calling to the east.

"When we first developed the (ZUM) plan, the community around Etiwanda was not like it is today," Smith said.

"There were a lot more orange groves and vineyards, and Kaiser Steel was still in operation," he added.

So the company plans to petition the PUC for a change.

Flood leaves mark on one man's home

By Kimberly Heinrichs

The Oct. 2 flash flood left its muddy mark on the home of San Antonio Heights resident Larry Langdale. Literally.

A 2-foot ring of dirt lay in testimony to the floodwaters that crashed against the white exterior walls of the home on north San Antonio Avenue.

Soggy, muddy rust-colored carpets lay rolled on the patio ready to be thrown away. On the other side of the patio lay the remains of an 8-foot combination block and wood wall destroyed in the storm.

The home's interior is no better, with the carpets removed to reveal the mud-lined floors in the damp, musty rooms.

Langdale is spending his vacation mopping up after the 30-minute flood that caused an estimated $14,000 damage to his home.

What makes him particularly discouraged is that this is the third flood that has damaged his home since he and his wife Betty built it 11 years ago. Flood insurance will not cover the incident because it does not affect a large enough area, he said.

Kiwanis Club plan special programs

The Rancho Grande Kiwanis Club of Rancho Cucamonga is planning several special programs this month.

On Friday Steve Butters, Kiwanis Lt. Gov. Division 15, will speak to the group.

On Oct. 24 the group will host a Rancho Cucamonga mayor's candidate forum.

Financial planner Robert Glascock will speak at the meeting Oct. 31.

The Kiwanians meet at the Sassy Steer Restaurant Fridays at 7 a.m.

They feel the county should take some responsibility by building a better flood control system, he said. But when he has contacted the county, he was told that since it was on private property it was between he and the neighbors, he said.

"The county has no responsibility in that area," agreed Fred Contaoi, assistant director of operations for county flood control.

Charles Laird, assistant director of planning for flood control, said the county and city of Upland have been working on joint projects in the eastern section of San Antonio Heights. He said Upland has indicated that those are the real problem areas.

Although the flood control district may look at the San Antonio Avenue area, both Contaoi and Laird said a great deal of study must be done before a natural water pattern is changed. Laird said the project would also be very expensive for the limited county budget.

Mrs. Langdale's sister Joy Sorenson is not waiting around. She is collecting neighborhood signatures for a petition to bring to the county Board of Supervisors demanding attention be given to the problem.

"We're just fed up with the fortunes and fortunes these people have spent (repairing their homes)," she said.

Langdale estimates he will have spent $32,000 in flood repairs after this episode. His sister-in-law, Patricia McKinney, estimates it will take $10,000 to repair their home, just north of the Langdales's.

Two other area homes sustained a combined total of $12,000 damage according to the California Department of Forestry.

The floodwaters came from a stoned-in drainage ditch that runs down the middle of the private yards on that block of San Antonio Avenue.

Langdale and McKinney figure that last Friday's problem developed when debris thrown in the ditch by their northerly neighbors clogged in the ditch, forming a dam.

When the trapped water built up enough pressure, it ripped through the makeshift dam and sent a wave shooting across Patricia McKinney's yard, they said. It filled the McKinney pool instantly and overflowed, knocking down the retaining wall between the McKinney and Langdale property, they said.

McKinney's 12-year-old son Christopher was home at the time.

"When the water hit,

Christopher said it looked like a high wall coming down," she said.

Pieces of lemon trees and discarded plant pots caused the blockage, McKinney said.

comes from the town of Ashkelon, Israel.

Although the other three are staying in Upland for the entire school year, Sasson is leaving in January.

"I have to go back to join the air force," he said.

In Israel, everyone 18 and older has to join the armed services, he explained.

He finds life in United States a little more conservative than his country.

"Here we have to ask permission from the parents all the time," he said. "We have more freedom in Israel. But, basically, the young people are all the same. We like to do the same things."

The food, however, is unusual.

"Everything is canned or in boxes," Sasson said of American foods.

For Strihagen, living in the United States has been quite an experience.

"There are so many television channels here," the young man from Stockholm said. "We only have two. I like that you have a lot of movies, but your game shows are cheap."

He can't believe the devotion to daytime soap operas, either.

"Every day at 12 (noon) my host mother and sister would run to the television to watch, 'All My Children,'" he said, with a laugh. "They would say, 'please don't disturb us. We have to watch this.'"

He is also amazed at the amount of junk food Americans eat.

"There is a lot more fat people here," he said. "We eat food that is better for you."

But he does like the attitude of the people.

"Everybody is very friendly here," he said. "It is easier to start conversations here. They are more open than in my country."

Keller finds America completely different from her home in Switzerland.

"The weather and the people. Everything looks new," she said.

Like Strihagen, Keller also finds Americans to be very open people.

"You have so many friends that it is harder to have really good friends," she said.

One thing that bothers the young girl is American patriotism.

"American people love their country too much," she said. "They can't see the goodness in other countries. When I hear the students here say, 'I hate France,' or 'I hate Italy,' I ask them why and they can never tell me."

Hilmarsdottir likes the warm beaches and hot weather of California.

"The beaches in Iceland are very cold," she said.

She is very proud that her country was chosen for the pre-Summit meeting between President Reagan and U.S.S.R. Premier Mikhail Gorbachev.

All four find school at Upland High School easier than school in their countries.

"There are more classes to choose from," Hilmarsdottir said.

Sasson agreed.

Arbor.

"We feel Mr. Maroney's action regarding compliance with the provisions of the conditional use permit and the outstanding court orders does not provide the residents of Upland with the legal representation we expect from a city attorney," the letter reads.

Maroney has served as city attorney for 23 years, he said.

McDonough, who crafted the letter with four others, said the request springs from several incidences, beginning in 1984 when the school's permit was up for modification.

She said residents were not notified by mail of the Planning Commission hearing and that publicly posted notices were torn down before residents ever saw them.

When the residents later asked to have their say, after the modification allowing more students was granted, she said Maroney did nothing about it.

"He probably could have put it in abeyance. We don't know what he could do, but we felt something should have been done," she said.

Maroney said the residents should have appealed to the City Council if they were concerned.

The residents were also upset when Maroney and the city allowed the school to have more than the 225 students allowed by their permit, McDonough said.

Although Maroney said the city only allowed the students to remain until the end of the fall semester, McDonough said Carden Arbor kept the extra children until the end of the school year in the spring.

Maroney charged that the residents want an attorney who represents their particular interests rather than the general interests of the city.

He recommended revocation of the school's permit Monday, but he said it would have been premature to do so earlier.

"I don't just go out and revoke any permit when they violate their conditional use permit," he said. "It takes taxpayer money to do that."

He said that he feels Upland now has enough evidence that the school is not living up to its permit conditions to risk taking the matter to court. He said that he has waited for adequate proof because the court will take the school's $400,000 investment into account.

"The court is a court of equity as well as a court of law," he explained.

Although the residents were told copies of the letters would be given to council members before Monday's meeting, Travers said he only saw the letters Tuesday.

He said he will send the residents a response

"explaining the role of city attorneys in protecting the city and citizens against things that will wind up costing them a lot of money to litigate when there isn't much chance of success."

Mayor Richard Anderson and Council Members Al Canestro and Frank Carpenter agreed that the residents had misplaced the blame for the long spell of legal inaction on the school issue.

"If they've got a bone to pick, it's with us," Carpenter said.

"Perhaps the problem is that he hasn't been given sufficient direction in the past," Anderson said, adding that unless Maroney had ignored council direction, "I don't think we could put the onus of it on him."

Barrels of fun at the Grape Harvest Festival

It promised to be four days of grapes, gluttony and good times for 40,000 people. By the organizer's account it was.

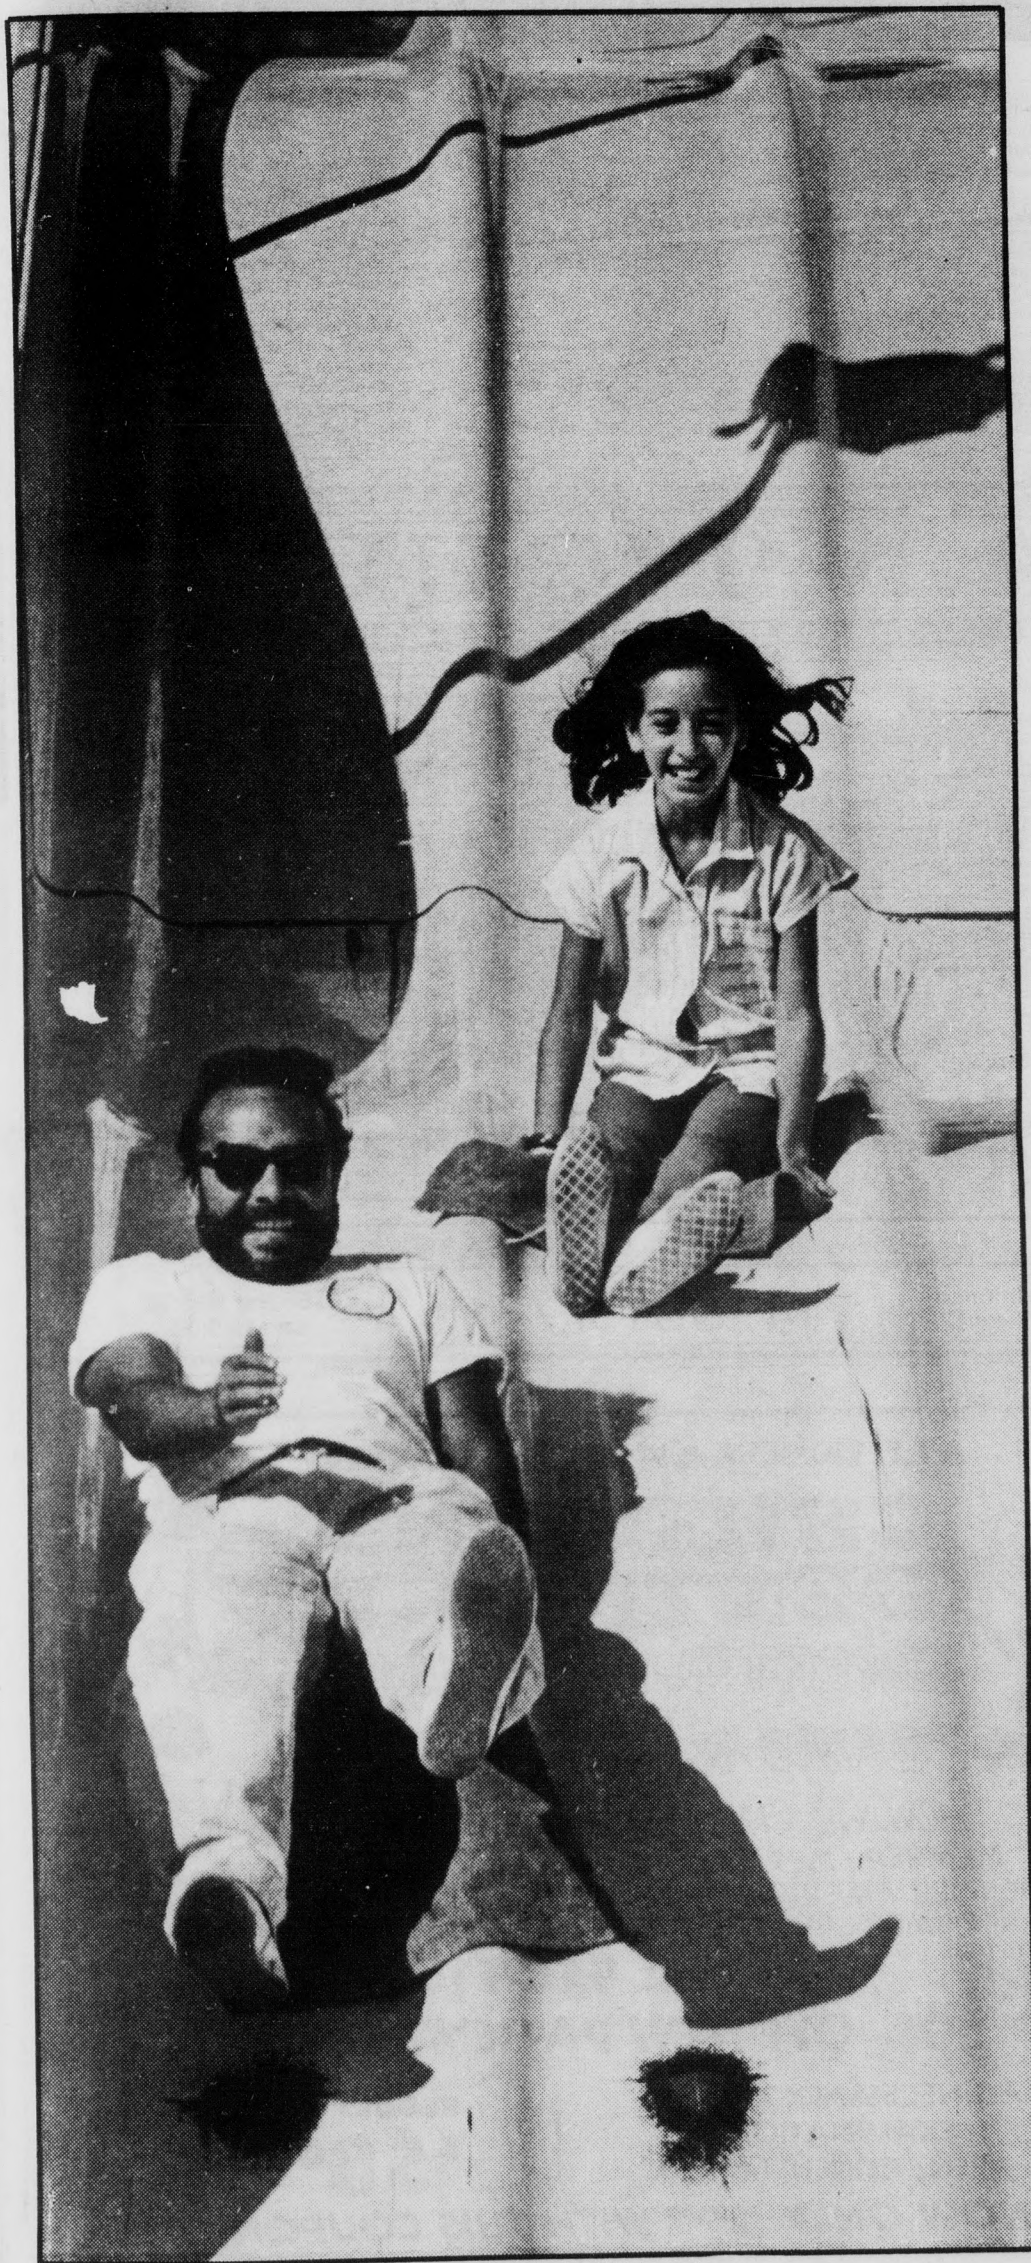

Bob Dutton, the president of Rancho Cucamonga's Chamber of Commerce and chairman of the Grape Harvest Festival Committee, said the only shadow hanging over this year's event was the lack of shadows. The sun didn't shine on the festival until Sunday, it's last day.

Nonetheless, Dutton said the event "in the sense of the good will and publicity it fostered for our community was an enormous success."

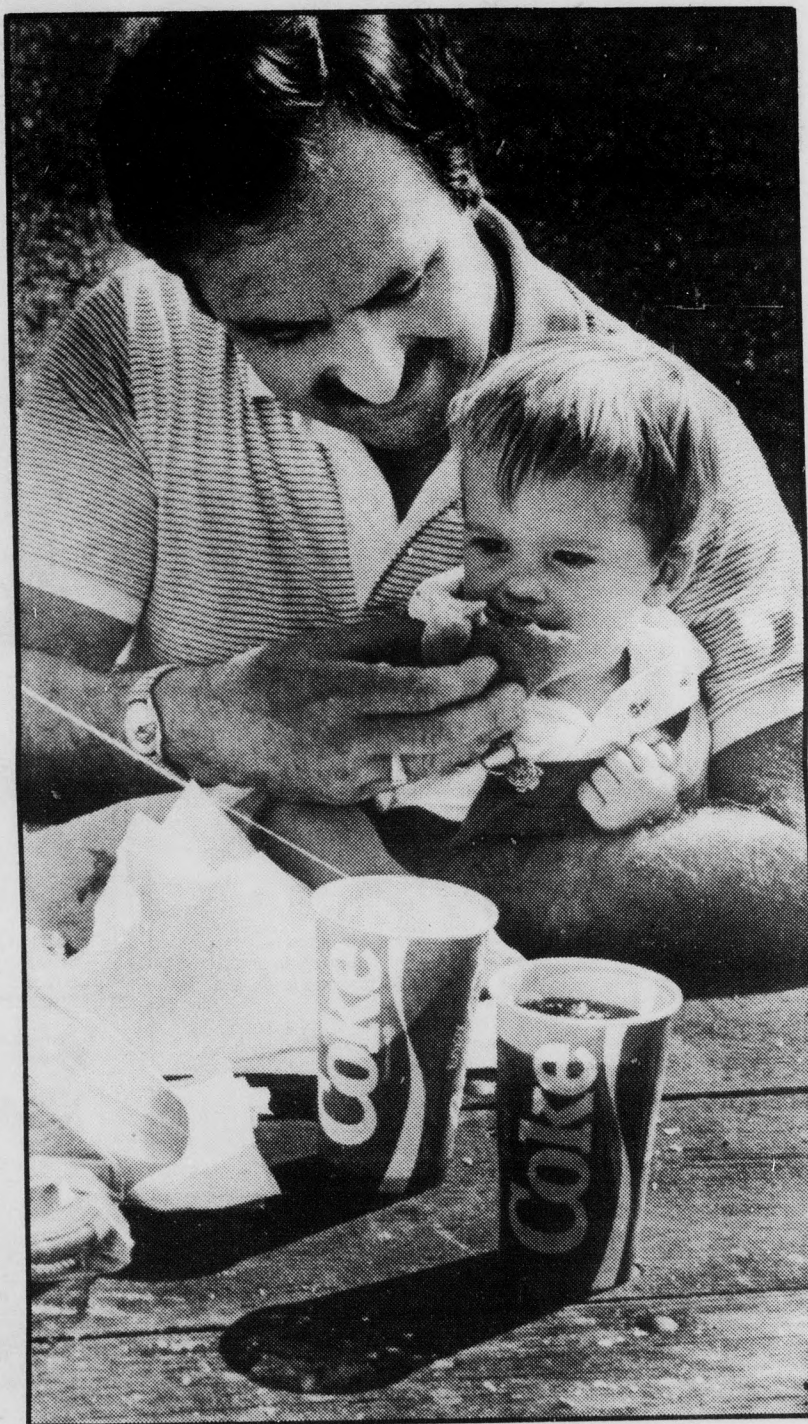

Much of the success is owed to the 500 volunteers who plan and staff the event, Dutton said. "Because of the volunteers we can bring the community the equivalent of a county fair — but the volunteers make our fair nicer than any other around."

"And," he said, "We've already been talking about how we can make next year's festival even nicer, with or without grey skies."

Photography by Kathy Frey

During Rancho Cucamonga's Sixth Annual Grape Harvest Festival, Star Shields (far left) airbrushes a one-of-a-kind design on Michael Tulledge of San Bernardino. Besides booths, stages and eateries, the fun zone offers even more excitement. Ronni and Ruben Mendoza of Ontario (left) enjoy the big slide. With a myriad of foods to choose from Chuck Ingram and his grandson Joel Michael Duer decide to share one sandwich (above).

Don't let asthma keep you down, Olympian says

By Suzanne Sproul

Asthma and other potentially debilitating diseases shouldn't be obstacles to achieving your goals, according to Olympic swimmer Nancy Hogshead.

"It took me 15 years of hard work to win my gold medals and I had asthma. It doesn't matter what your goals are, just don't let handicaps stop you," she told Upland School District children this week on behalf of the local Parents of Asthmatic Children Support Group Association.

Hogshead, Jeanette Bolden (Olympics track and field gold medalist) and Craig Beardsley (Olympic swimmer) share a common problem — all have asthma. The trio also share a common triumph — all have competed in athletic sports and have shined.

The Olympians encouraged students at Citrus and Baldy View schools in Upland and Upland High School to work toward their goals.

Upland High students are planning to start an asthma support group at the school.

"How many of you have asthma or are short of breath when you try and do something? It's OK to have asthma. It's nothing to be ashamed of," Bolden told a group of Citrus School children.

"Asthma isn't a handicap. I've had it for 26 years and I've been able to accomplish my goals," she said.

Beardsley said he has outgrown the discomfort and pain caused by his asthma, but he still remembers them.

"I decided to study and train and work hard to make my dreams come true, despite the asthma. And I'm here to tell you can do it, too," he told students.

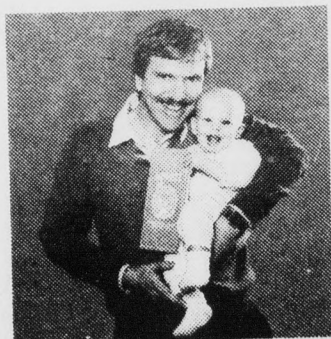

The sports stars also attended a PAC fund-raiser last week. The event was designed to help raise money to start other asthma support groups in the country.

"About 200 people went to the event and it was very successful. We had a lot of support from the community. Forty corporations and businesses locally and throughout the country donated money and items to help make our dreams come true," said Peggy Thomas, PAC president and founder.

"We have 14 support groups ready to start up elsewhere in the country, but it takes money. We want to help raise money to help families. We feel that with education, prevention, proper care and guidance that asthma can be brought under control as with many other diseases," Thomas said.

Donations are always needed. For more information about asthma, starting a support group or ways to volunteer, write PAC, P.O. Box 5019, Upland 91785.

First adult entertainment ordinance OK'd

By Kimberly Heinrichs

After two delays, the Upland City Council approved first reading of an adult entertainment ordinance last week, restricting where and how such businesses will operate in the city.

The law will come up for a final reading at the council's next meeting.

Voting on the ordinance was delayed twice in September to give the city attorney more time for study.

And last week was the second time the council had approved a first reading of the law. It did so last April, but sent the proposed ordinance back for study and another Planning Commission hearing after an appearance by the owner of the city's only X-rated business, T&A Video, 2121 W. Foothill Blvd.

Although the ordinance passed unanimously Monday, Councilman Al Canestro called it "too accommodating" and said he approved it with "many trepidations."

"I don't get the feeling that we're throwing our best punch in this battle," he said. "Somewhere out there, there's got to be some process by which we can protect our city."

His statement was met with applause from the audience. Some residents expressed dissatisfaction with the law's strength.

Eileen Olson brought a copy of Dallas' adult business ordinance, which she said was recently upheld by Texas courts.

"Now it seems to me if a city like Dallas can pass an ordinance with teeth in it ... our city can do the same," she said.

One of the residents' objections was the paring back of a stipulation that adult businesses be at least 1,000 feet away from homes. The new ordinance reduces the distance to 500 feet.

City Attorney Don Maroney explained that the revision was necessary to keep adult businesses from being limited to locating in gravel pits. Because the operations are protected by free-speech laws, cities must provide reasonable places for establishment, Maroney said.

The law would also limit the locations of most new adult businesses to highway commercial and airport commercial zones, and would allow some adult novelty and book stores in industrial zones.

Another revision residents resented was the removal of hours-of-operation restrictions placed on X-rated businesses. Originally the law had required that the businesses close down between 2 a.m. and 10 a.m.

But T&A Video attorney Roger Diamond had charged that the requirement was discriminatory and unconstitutional.

"I really couldn't come up with any reasons as to why it should be closed (during those hours)," Maroney said in an interview before the meeting, "because there's nobody out then. We don't have any schoolchildren or any young ladies (out at that time) in the neighborhood, or any of the people from which we want to segregate them."

A third change was the extension of time from three months to six months for T&A Video to take the doors off its video viewing booths.

Resident Darvel Allred said he was "surprised and disappointed" at the changes.

Whoopee! Whoopi's terrific in 'Jack Flash'

Whoopi Goldberg has come a long way from a job as cosmetologist in a mortuary to movie stardom. Her first role was as the lead in one of last year's best films, "The Color Purple." Now, although surrounded by a formidable supporting cast, she practically wipes everyone off the screen and makes "Jumpin' Jack Flash" into a one-woman show. There's no way anyone's going to steal a scene while the amazing Goldberg is around.

Her second role as Terry Doolittle, computer operator in a bank, is a far cry from the Oscar-nominated part of Celie in Steven Spielberg's film version of Alice Walker's Pulitzer Prize-winning novel.

Terry is a bright, sophisticated, iconoclastic young woman trapped in a dull job. She longs for romance, excitement, foreign travel. One day, she finds it on the screen of her computer terminal. Somehow, a secret agent with the code name Jumpin' Jack Flash — obviously handsome and British — starts communicating with her. He is in danger, trapped somewhere behind the Iron Curtain, and asks Terry for help.

Suddenly Terry has more excitement than she'd ever bargained for. All sorts of secret agents start popping out of the woodwork, and they all seem to have Terry in their sights.

Under Penny Marshall's direction, the story goes to pieces at about this point and becomes very muddled.

And yet, Goldberg holds your interest, merely by engaging in shtick and nonsense. She has such a great command of the American language, especially the vernacular of the younger generation, that you find yourself relaxed and entertained just listening to her.

Review

And she has great gifts as a physical comedian. And she moves so gracefully on the screen.

No wonder that we don't care a bit about anyone else in this movie. Here's the list of those cheated by the script: Carol Kane, who comes across as a caricature of herself, her voice having taken over her body. Annie Potts, who has learned to control HER power-mower voice. Stephen Collins in another production that wastes his talent.

Jeroen Krabbe, the distinguished Dutch actor. Jonathan Pryce and John Wood, the distinguished English actors. Sara Botsford, the distinguished Canadian actor. Garry Marshall, the distinguished American director.

And Jim Belushi, Tracey Ullman (Meryl Streep's buddy in "Plenty"), Jon Lovitz ("Saturday Night Live"), Paxton Whitehead and Roscoe Lee Browne.

You walk out of the movie house trying to figure out why these fine actors were in this movie since you can't remember who played what and why and with whom.

But, somehow, you're appreciative that director Marshall had the good sense to let Goldberg do her thing. As a movie, "Jumpin' Jack Flash" was beyond salvation otherwise.

Developers must build extra fire protection

By Mike Krapfl

The Foothill Fire Protection District board of directors approved an ordinance last week requiring developers to build extra fire protection into high-rise buildings.

Fire Chief Dennis Michael said the ordinance is necessary because "the less fire protection that is built into a high-rise, the more personnel it takes to fight a fire in a high-rise. That costs the taxpayers money."

The intent of the ordinance, Michael said, is to shift some of the cost of preventing such fires from taxpayers to the developers that will build Rancho Cucamonga's high-rises.

Among the safety devices the ordinance requires developers to build into their towers are sprinkler systems, water reservoirs, alarm boxes, smoke detectors and smoke ventilation systems.

The ordinance defines a high-rise as any building exceeding 45 feet or four stories in height. The higher above that a building gets, the stricter the safety standards it must meet.

Before passing the ordinance, board member John Lyons asked the board to consider delaying a vote on the ordinance until developers had a chance to review it and make comments.

Michael said copies of the ordinance had been given to several developers.

"They all knew this was to be the first reading of the ordinance tonight," he said, "if there was significant opposition I'm sure they would have been here to comment."

Lyon said, "I think we need to work closely with the developers on this, and if that takes six more months, it takes six months."

Director Kevin Eggleston replied, "It's already been out to them six months. Let's vote."

The board's approval was unanimous. The board will listen to a public hearing of the ordinance at its Nov. 13 meeting.

College gets grant

Pomona College has been selected as one of 15 institutions in the nation and the only college in the West to receive a grant from the Pew Memorial Trust for participation in its new liberal arts enrichment program.

The college will receive a grant of $480,000 during a five-year period.

Another way to keep varnish from skinning or gelling over is to keep putting the varnish in progressively smaller cans as you use the varnish. This keeps a full can all the time and eliminates the oxygen in the top of the can that causes the gelling.

You don't need scissors or ruler to cut up sandpaper to fit your electric sander—just make a sharp edged wooden strip the size of your sander's paper, place it on the sandpaper, and tear the sheet to size.

To mix small amounts of epoxy, simply squeeze equal amounts of resin and hardener into the corner of a plastic sandwich bag. Twist and mix the two until a uniform color appears. Then puncture the bag with a pin and squeeze out the glue as required. No clean-up is required—just throw the bag away.

Upland takes advantage, stays unbeaten

When opportunity knocks, good football teams answer.

Upland High School turned three fumble recoveries into just enough points to defeat Claremont, 15-7, and remain unbeaten in high school football action.

The Highlanders fell behind, 7-0, in the pivotal Baseline League game played in a steady drizzle in Highlander Stadium Friday night. Two Upland fumbles allowed Claremont to score its first quarter touchdown.

After Chuck Leming scored on a 1-yard touchdown to give the Wolfpack the lead, the Highlanders rallied.

Mike Mitchell scooped up a fumble and raced in from eight yards out for Upland. James Petrotta added the extra-point to make it 7-7.

The Highlanders won the game in the fourth quarter when, after another fumble recovery, Greg Fiorindo pased 10 yards to Jeff Rhoads. Steve Fiorindo mishandled the snap on the conversion try, but recovered to carry the ball in for the two-point conversion.

The Highlanders are now 5-0 overall, 2-0 in the Baseline League.

"Opportunistic football is what that's called," said Upland coach Pete Merandi. "At one point, you have to thank your luck, but we gave them their score so it evened out."

In other Baseline League games, Alta Loma bombed Chaffey 32-7 and Don Lugo drubbed Pomona 21-7.

The victory was Alta Loma's first of the season and gave the Braves a 1-3-1 mark, 1-1 in the league.

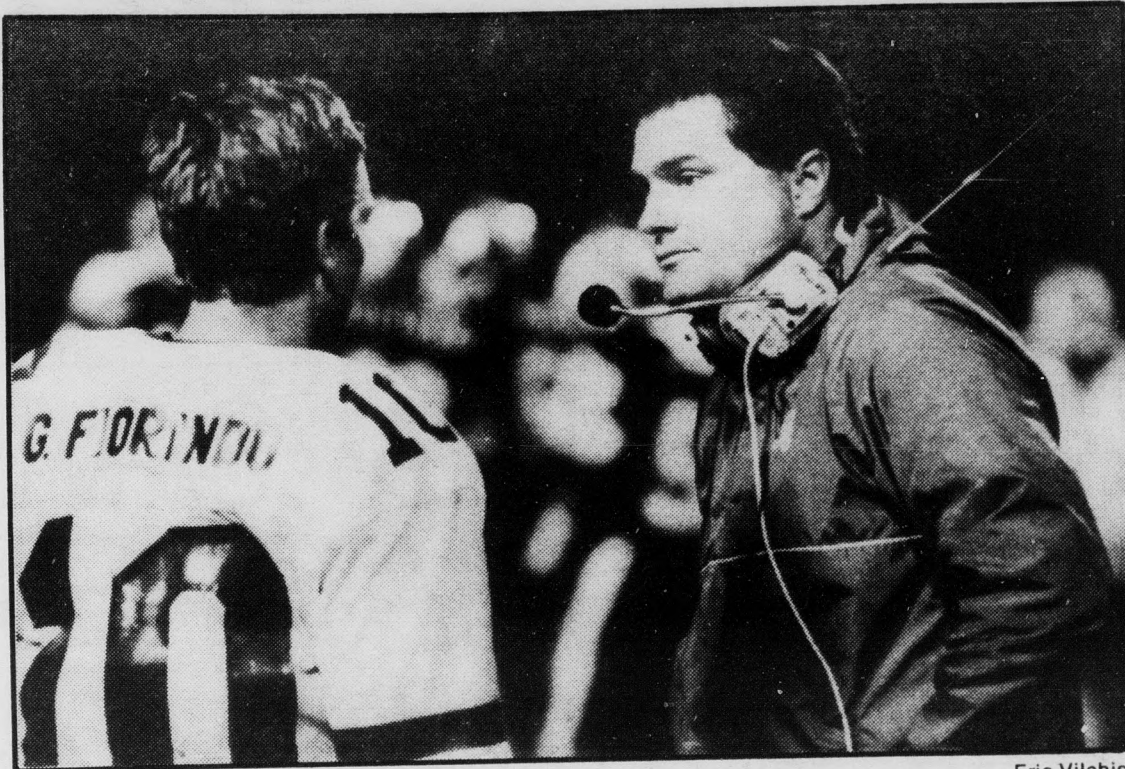

Eric Holladay rushed for 84 yards and three touchdowns as the Braves trounced Chaffey.

Sophomore quarterback Brandon Proctor threw a 61-yard touchdown pass to Aaron Thomas to give the Braves an insurmountable 26-7 lead.

"We could very easily be 4-1 right now," said Alta Loma coach Art Keough. "We've played very well all year."

Etiwanda lost to Ontario, 23-18, in Hacienda League action.

Seven turnovers paved the way for Etiwanda's defeat. The Eagles fall to 0-2 in the Hacienda League.

Eric Vilchis

Upland coach Pete Merandi and quarterback Greg Fiorindo have kept the Scots' mark perfect.

Chaffey travels for SCAC football encounter

Chaffey College continues its football season Saturday when it visits College of the Desert in Southern California Athletic Conference action.

Game-time is 7:30 p.m. The Panthers will be trying to even their SCAC mark at 1-1 after losing their opener two weeks ago to Antelope Valley.

Last Saturday, the Panthers roared to a 32-13 win over the semi-pro Bellflower Bears.

The Panthers may have lost a key offensive lineman in the win.

Center Ben Wheeler was hurt in the second quarter. The 6-foot-5, 250-pound freshman injured his left shoulder and was sidelined for the rest of the game.

Chaffey's freshman quarterback Joe Bulf was sacked six times, including a neck-snapping blindside number delivered in the fourth quarter by 6-4, 240-pound Phillip Hockett.

He recovered, though, to complete seven of 18 passes for 126 yards in his second start of the season.

He became the No. 1 quarterback two weeks ago when Dan Farley, who led Chaffey to a 2-0 mark, was ruled ineligible.

California Community College Association rules dictate that an athlete must sit out one scholastic quarter after transferring from one school to another. Apparently, Farley did not.

The quarterback came to Chaffey after a brief professional baseball career. He was ruled ineligible because he had played college baseball, turned pro and then directly began a football career with the Panthers.

Farley's case may eventually cost the Panthers their two wins. Since the victories came while Chaffey was using an ineligible performer, it may have to forfeit both.

With or without Farley, Chaffey had more than enough to handle the overweight and out-of-shape Bears Saturday.

Chaffey scored on its second possession of the game. Bulf engineered a 15-play, 67-yard drive that took 5 minutes, 17 seconds.

Freshman running back Greg Gray ran 12 yards and Bulf passed 19 more to Randy Bybee on Bellflower's 36. Five plays later, Bulf faked a handoff and rolled to the left where he found tight end Matt Rasmussen open to the 13.

Shortly after, Gray ran into the end zone from one yard out. He also ran in for the two-point conversion that gave Chaffey a 15-0 lead with 3:17 to play in the first quarter.

Following a Bellflower punt, the Panthers marched 53 yards to score. Chaffey kept the ball on the ground almost exclusively on the march. Bulf eventually ran 9 yards for the score. Steve Williams kick made it 15-0 with 11:50 to play in the first half.

Bulf later threw a 62-yard touchdown pass to wide receiver Anthony Lardieri.

Crucial volleyball game set

Alta Loma and Upland girls' volleyball teams collide in a key Baseline League match on the Highlanders' floor at 5:30 p.m. Friday.

The teams met earlier in the season at Alta Loma with the Braves winning.

At the start of the week, the Braves were unbeaten through eight league outings and the Highlanders once-beaten.

Smile: all the reward chairwoman needs

By Suzanne Sproul

Seeing the smile on a child's face is quite a reward, according to Dee Hansen, past chairwoman of Operation School Bell.

"The children are all smiles when they go to school the next day and have new clothes on," Hansen said.

Operation School Bell began last year and involves outfitting children in need of clothes. Nurses in the Central, Cucamonga and Ontario-Montclair school districts recommend children for the program.

"My one concern about this program was whether or not it was going to be a one-shot project or would it continue. It was a great service last year and it sounds like they will be continuing it again this year," said Deanna Bowers, Central School District nurse.

Operation School Bell clothed 43 students last year in the Central School District alone.

Overall, about 200 children have been given a set of clothing through the program.

The program is scheduled to begin again this year next month. Clothes are distributed to qualifying children the first and third Tuesday of the month, according to Paulette Tawadrous, current Operation School Bell chairwoman.

Assistance League of Upland volunteers staff the group's Archibald Avenue facility in Rancho Cucamonga.

"I'm sure there were families that we missed, but the ones we were able to help were served greatly by the program," Bowers said.

The philanthropy is one of three sponsored by the Assistance League of Upland. The women's group also sponsors the San Antonio Community Hospital Dental Center and Scholastic Aptitude Test preparatory classes.

The group relies each year on financial contributions from West Valley patronesses. Assistance League members will honor those who support the group's philanthropies during an Oct. 2 tea.

The group also has helped families during emergency situations when fires have destroyed clothes supplies.

The League found clothing suppliers who provide the group with brand new jeans, T-shirts, socks, underwear and jackets.
